Overview

The federal FairTax proposal would replace most existing federal taxes with a comprehensive consumption tax in the form of a national retail sales tax levied at a tax-inclusive rate of 23 percent. The act would repeal the federal income tax (including the capital gains tax and the alternative minimum tax), the corporate income tax, federal payroll taxes, the self-employment tax, and the estate and gift tax. The FairTax Act is intended to be revenue neutral in the sense that it would raise the same amount of tax revenue as the taxes it would replace.

Most of the analysis of a "FairTax" has examined its prospects at the national level. However, there is some interest in enacting "fair taxes" or consumption tax-based reform at the state level. One such state is Alabama.

In this study, The Tuerck Foundation for Economics, Law and the Humanities calculates the revenue-neutral Alabama FairTax rate that would replace existing taxes under three scenarios. Scenario 1 replaces state tax revenues listed in Table 1. Scenario 2 adds local sales tax to the state taxes to be replaced by the Alabama FairTax; and the Scenario 3 calculates the average local sales tax rate that would be needed to replace the current revenue, were the local sales taxes to adopt the Alabama FairTax base.

Tax Revenues to be Replaced.

The Alabama Department of Revenue's "Monthly Abstract" for September 2016 reports that net state tax collections totaled $9.178 billion in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016.²

However, we assume the Alabama FairTax would only replace state tax revenues raised by the individual income tax, the business income taxes, the sales tax and various industry specific excise taxes. This lowers the tax revenue to be replaced by the Alabama FairTax to $7.757 billion in 2016 and $8.027 billion in 2017.

We also include two additional calculations that incorporate the local sales taxes. Local governments levy local sales taxes on the same tax base as the state sales taxes. These taxes would be repealed along with the state sales taxes under a switch to the Alabama FairTax.³

These papers include discussions of the macroeconomic effects of a FairTax, its effects on charitable giving, methods for determining an optimal FairTax rate, administrative issues and the implications for fiscal federalism.

³ According to a discussion with state legislators.

Under the second scenario, we assume the Alabama FairTax would replace all local sales tax revenues, which raised $2,587 billion in 2016 and we estimate will raise $2.680 billion in 2017. The third scenario estimates the average local sales tax rate (averaged across all local governments) that would replace the local sales tax revenue, if local governments adopted the Alabama FairTax base for their local sales taxes. Table 1 lists details of the individual tax revenues that would be replaced by the Alabama FairTax.

These figures become the numerator in the calculations of the Alabama FairTax rate under the three scenarios. In other words, the Alabama FairTax must raise this amount of revenue in order to be considered a revenue neutral tax change (neither lowers nor raises tax revenue).

Tax-inclusive versus Tax-exclusive Rates

It is worth noting the difference between a tax-inclusive and a tax-exclusive rate. Individual income and payroll tax rates (Social Security; Medicare; Medicaid) include the taxes to be paid in the tax base on which the tax rate is imposed (tax-inclusive). If an individual's gross income is $100 and the sum of their income plus employment tax rate is 23%, taxes owed equals $23. Traditional state sales taxes are imposed on a tax base equal to the pre-tax portion of a good's price (tax-exclusive). A good priced at $77 with a 30% sales tax rate yields a $23 tax bill.

These differences makes the comparison between income and sales tax rates complicated, especially when a sales tax replaces an income tax. Each tax can just as easily be quoted as a tax-inclusive or tax-exclusive rate for easier comparison.

The federal FairTax rate first proposed in 2005 is a tax-inclusive rate, as is the current Alabama personal income tax, whereas most state-level sales taxes are quoted on a tax-exclusive basis. Since our data includes taxes in the tax base variables, we calculate the tax-inclusive rate.

The Alabama FairTax Base

The next step to calculating an Alabama FairTax rate is to determine the tax base to which the rate applies. The FairTax attempts to create a very broad tax base that would allow for a low rate. The broadest FairTax base for Alabama would be the total State Gross Domestic Product (GDP). If we were to levy the Alabama FairTax on $209.382 billion of state GDP, the rate would be 3.1 percent ($6.457 / $209.382) on a tax-inclusive basis, since GDP includes tax revenues.⁴

Although broad, a state FairTax excludes some components of GDP, such as investment and federal government spending. In addition, the FairTax calls for a "Prebate" that excludes from the tax base all consumption spending up to the national poverty line. We need to account for these changes in calculating the Alabama FairTax base.

We calculate the tax base using data from IMPLAN Group, LLC. IMPLAN provides detailed datasets for state and local economies. IMPLAN data show business-to-business, government-to business, business-to-household, and government-to-household transactions.⁵ The IMPLAN data allow us to calculate the FairTax base using a single comprehensive state dataset. Table 3 on page 9 displays the results of the calculation.

IMPLAN provides comprehensive private consumption data.⁶ However, we exclude spending on education and imputed rent from private consumption and add back in the sale of new homes and dwellings as called for in the federal FairTax Act.

We estimate the private consumption base of $148.328 billion in Alabama for Calendar Year (CY) 2014, the most recent data available. We grow the 2014 data to 2016 and 2017 using the deflators within IMPLAN data for each sector then take half from 2015 and half from 2016 to produce our estimate for FY 2016 of $154.766 billion and $158.131 billion, which are displayed in the first row of Table 3. Table 5 on page 11 displays the detailed products and services included in the household consumption base.

IMPLAN also provides the data for state and local government consumption spending.⁷ Alabama state and local government spending on goods and services was $7.310 billion in 2014. We grow the 2014 data to FY 2016 and FY 2017 using the same method as with private consumption spending, yielding $7.712 billion in 2016 and $7.921 billion in 2017, seen in the second row of Table 3. Table 6 on page 19 displays the detailed products and services included in the government consumption base.

Another component of the FairTax base is state and local government spending on non-education salaries and wages. IMPLAN estimates that Alabama state and local governments spent $8.538 billion in 2014 on non-education salary and wages. Using the same growth method as above, we estimate state and local spending on non-education salaries and wages at $8.868 billion in FY 2016 and $9.038 billion in 2017, listed in the third row of Table 3. Table 7 displays the breakdown between state and local government salaries.

Adding the three lines together yields a gross FairTax tax base of $171.346 billion in FY 2016 and $175.090 billion in 2017. See line 4 in Table 3.

A Beacon Hill Institute study showed the national FairTax gross tax base to be 80 percent of the national economy in 2007.⁸ We estimate Alabama State GDP to be $209.382 billion in 2015, which means our gross FairTax base is 78.2 percent of state GDP. While it is slightly lower than the national calculation, it gives us confidence that our gross FairTax is reasonable.

The FairTax Act includes an administrative fee of 0.25 percent of the tax base to be paid to vendors and states for collecting the FairTax. We calculate the administrative fee as a percentage of the net tax base.

The Prebate

To make the tax more progressive across all income groups, the FairTax also calls for a Prebate that would be paid to all households. The Prebate is based on the federal poverty guidelines adjusted to remove any marriage penalty. The Prebate may be thought of as a rebate, except that it is paid at the beginning of each month in advance of that month's consumption expenditures. The size of the monthly Prebate provided to a given household is set at the amount of FairTax that a given household would pay over the course of the month, were it consuming goods and services at the federal poverty line.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services publishes the poverty guidelines by household size for the 48 lower states.⁹ The U.S. Census Bureau provides estimates of the number of Alabama households by family size.¹⁰ Using these figures, we estimate the Prebate will reduce the tax base by $37.594 billion in 2016 and $38.077 billion in 2017. Table 2 displays the details of the Prebate calculation.

The FairTax Rate

As stated above, we calculate the FairTax rate under two scenarios. Scenario 1 replaces state tax revenues listed in Table 1. Scenario 2 adds local sales tax to the state taxes to be replaced by the Alabama FairTax; and the Scenario 3 calculates the average local sales tax rate that would be needed to replace the current revenue, were the local sales taxes to adopt the Alabama FairTax base. We report the Alabama FairTax and local options sales tax rates for fiscal years 2016 and 2017.

Scenario 1

To calculate the FairTax rate, we first add the components of the household and government consumption bases, which yields a gross tax base of $171.346 billion in 2016. Next, we subtract the Prebate from the gross base, yielding $133.752 billion. We calculate the administrative fee by multiplying $133.752 by 0.25 percent, yielding $334 million. We subtract the $334 from the base to produce the net FairTax base of $133.418 billion.

We calculate the tax revenues to be replaced as $7.757 billion. To calculate the FairTax rate, we divide the $7.757 in revenue to be replaced by the FairTax by the net tax base of $133.418 billion which yields a rate of 5.81 percent for FY 2016. The same calculation would yield a FairTax rate of 5.88 percent in 2017.

^{*}totals may not add due to rounding. increased by 3.4% over FY2016, per State of Alabama Executive Budget, Fiscal Year 2017 growth rate over FY 2016 figures for the corresponding taxes.

Scenario 2 and 3

The tax bases under scenarios 2 and 3 are exactly the same as scenario 1, but the revenues to be replaced by the Alabama FairTax change. Table 4 displays the calculations under both scenarios.

Under scenario 2, we add all local property taxes, or $2.587 billion in 2016 and $2.680 billion in 2017 to the taxes to be replaced by the Alabama FairTax, which increases total revenues to be replaced to $10.344 billion in 2016 and $10,707 billion in 2017. Using the same calculation as in scenario 1, we estimate the FairTax rate of 7.75 percent in 2016 and 7.88 percent in 2017.

Table 4: The Calculation of the Alabama FairTax Rate (millions $)

Scenario 2: Revenues include all local options sales taxes*

Net tax base	133,418	136,570
Tax revenue (to be replaced)	2,587	2,680
Tax-inclusive rate (%)	1.94	1.96

^{*}totals may not add due to rounding. increased by 3.4% over FY2016, per State of Alabama Executive Budget, Fiscal Year 2017 growth rate over FY 2016 figures for the corresponding taxes.

Under scenario 3, we calculate the average local sales tax rate (averaged across all local governments that levy a local sales tax) if local governments adopted the Alabama FairTax base. Local sales taxes raised $2.587 billion in 2016 and we estimate they would raise $2,680 billion in 2017. Using the same calculation as in scenario 1, we estimate an average local sales tax FairTax rate of 1.94 percent in 2016 and 1.96 percent in 2017 under the Alabama FairTax rate.

About the Authors

Paul Bachman is Director of Research at The Beacon Hill Institute. He manages the institute's research projects, including the development and deployment of the STAMP model. Mr. Bachman has authored research papers on state and national tax policy and on state labor policy. Each year, he produces the institute's state revenue forecasts for the Massachusetts legislature. He holds a Master of Science in International Economics from Suffolk University.

Dr. David Tuerck, (Ph.D., University of Virginia) is BHI's Executive Director. He is the former chairman of the Department of Economics at Suffolk University in Boston. He has published widely on economic policy issues and brings over three decades of experience as a working economist. An authority on public policy issues including state tax policy and analysis, welfare reform and the economics of regulation, he has made more than 100 television and radio appearances and has testified before the U.S. Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, Subcommittee on Children and Families, as well as various committees of the Massachusetts Legislature. He is past president of the North American Economics and Finance Association and a Heritage Foundation Policy Expert in economics.
